Both circulation managers of The Tribune and Telegram appeared in pole court this morning to testify that E W. Palmer, a special officer employed by the Saltair Beach company, bal assaulted Charles McGillis, agent for The Telegram, at the Saltair depot on July 9. The case, which was continued for decision until tomorrow morning, was of such import to the Tribune Publishing company that Gen-eral Manager Frank Sefrit sat through the proceedings that took up over an

the proceedings that took up over an bour.

Special Officer Palmer is accused by McGillis, the latter backed by The Tribune and Telegram, with having assailed him in forcibly ejecting him from the grounds of the Saltair depot. The testimony of the complaining witness was to the effect that on the date named he, having charge of the street size of The Telegram, went to the Seltair depot after a complaint had been made to him by two newsboys that they were not permitted to sell The Telegram at Saltair depot. When McGillis had attempted to pedie his papers there he had been, according to his story, roughly handled. J. W. Musgrave, circulation manager of The Tribune, and W. G. Weaver, circulation manager of the tree at the precise moment and witnessed the alleged assault, although under cross-examination both although under cross-examination both denied that the circumstance of McGildefied that the circumstance of McGil-lis being there, the assault, and the presence of the managers had been anything more than a coincidence. Both circulation managers admitted that they had some feeling, not personal, they had some lecting. Not present, the present of Saitair, but denied, in answer to Atty. Snow's questions, that the alleged assuit had been the outcome of a prearanged plan in sending a prizefighter to attempt to seil The Telegram.

For the defense it was admitted that Mr. Palmer had used force in ejecting McGillis from the Saltair depot grounds, but it was contended that this was because of the refusal of McGillis to leave when ordered. Half a dozen wineses were called to prove that no assault had been committed or blows struck, and McGillis' story was discreding as to the brutality used. The court mimated that the two points to be inimated that the two points to be considered were as to the authority or rich of Palmer to eject McGillis from the gounds, and whether more force than was necessary was used. Cunningham who in a neat speech, presented Mr. Mackenzie with a tie pin and cuff links as a token from "the old bunch," some of whom worked with Mr. Mackenzie 13 years ago when he first entered the newspaper field in Sait Lake. Mr. Mackenzie responded and told the "outsiders" just what the Press club had accomplished for the workers on the daily papers, how it brought them nearer together and gave them a place where they could spend their leisure time. A. F. Philips was calld upon and he, too, told of newspaper men and their work concluding with a tribute to the parting guest.

Not the least interesting feature of the evening was a demonstration in coin and card manipulation by J. S. Barker who gave a very clever performance in legerdemain quite up to the first class professional standard. Victor Gillam, the cartoonist whose work in Judge is familiar the country over, gave a series of lightning sketches on a blackboard that received decided applause. Another feature of the entertainment was the barn yard impersonations of Briant S. Young which brought down the house.

THE EXPENSE OF CITY GOVERNMENT

Census Bureau's Report Shows An Expenditure of $405,000,000.

PER CAPITA COST INCREASES

Burden Grows From $13.36 Per Capita To $16.81 in Six Years for Cities Over 30,000.

(Special to The News.) Washington, D. C., July 27 .-About $405,000,000 were spent 1908 in maintaining and operating the city departments of the 158 largest cities in the United States having an cities in the United States having an estimated population of $0,000 or more in 1908, whose financial statistics for that year have been collected by the census bureau and are analytically presented in its annual report on the statistics of cities for the year 1908.

In his letter of transmittal to Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor, Director Durand of the census bureau states that the report was prepared under the supervision of Dr. LeGrand Powers, chief statistician for agriculture, with the assistance of Division Chief Maling, of the census division of statistics or cities.

The maintenance of schools repre-

of the census division of statistics or cities.

The maintenance of schools represents $5 per cent of the total expenses of cities for "education" and cost more than any other municipal function, while the protection of life and property by the police, fire, and associated departments was second in cost. These two functions of education and protection of life and property cost $5 per cent of about $405,000,000, which was the total expense of maintaining and operating city departments. For the whole group of cities the average per capita expense for schools was $4.70; for police department, $2.25; and for fire department, $1.72. These per capita averages vary greatly among the several cities. Sait Lake City expended $8.18 per capita for schools: Newton, Mass., $8; and New York, Boston, Washington, Newark, Denver, Springfield, Mass., and Sacramento each expended over $6 for the same purpose, while Montgomery expended only $1.62; Charleston, $1.81; Norfolk, $2.15; St. Joseph, $2.17; Memphis, $2.19; Knoxville, $2.28; and Manchester and Galveston, each $2.34.

PER CAPITA COST INCREASES.

The increased costs of maintaining

The increased costs of maintaining the government departments of cities in recent years is illustrated by the fact that in 147 cities of over 30,000 population in 1902 it was $13.36 per capita, while for the same cities in 1908 it was $16.81.

The costs of maintaining the police department during the same interval for the same cities have risen steadily from $1.90 to $2.26 per capita; the fire department, from $1.33 to $1.72; health conservation, from $0.91 to $1.38; highways, from $1.72 to $1.83; and schools, from $3.69 to $4.70.

The financial transactions of these 158 largest cities involved the receipt and expenditure of more than 158 largest cities involved the receipt and expenditure of more than one and a quarter billions of dollars, the payments amounting to $1,284.000,000 and the receipts to $1,336.000,000 The excess of the receipts over the payments was due to large loans by the cities during the year and is reflected in cash on hand at the close of the year, $198,000,000 as compared with $145,000,000 on hand at the beginning of the year.

THE DIVISION OF PAYMENTS.

Of $1.236.782.824, which was the total of the municipal payments, 32.7 per cent was for the expenses of maintaining and operating the ordinary municipal departments and offices; 2.5 per cent was paid for the expenses of the maintenance and operation of self-supporting public-service enterprises, such as water-supply systems, lighting systems, etc.; 6.7 per cent was paid in interest on city debt; 22.2 per cent was paid for outlays for new buildings, equipment, and public improvements; 23.3 per cent represents payments in liquidation of debt; and 12.5 per cent represents payments by city funds, and general transfers.

The expenses of maintaining and operating the ordinary municipal departments and offices for the entire 158 cities amounted to $404.967.312, more than one-fourth of which was paid by New York city.
